The Celebrated Rail-Road Song.

THIRD VERSE.

And when, dear John, the time shall come that age creeps on apace;
When silver threads are thickly strown on wrinkled brow and face—
When from the faithful glass of Time life's sands are nearly run,
And slackened speed along the track tell our journey's almost done:
We'll see the golden city then, and loved ones gone before,
We'll walk with them the rounds of joy, where parting comes no more.
